JEALOUSY IN MAN AND WOMAN.

The following "On Jealousy" is from the German of Borne: "The subject of scarlet fever occupies over six pages of my encyclopedia, and that of jealousy hardly half a page. This is an extraordinary appreciation of the comparative importance of things. The disease which only touches the surface of human life is carefully treated by medical men, tenderly nursed, soon cured, or ended by a gentle death where nature proves irreconcilable. And jealousy, which penetrates to the inmost heart of the man or woman, gnaws, scorches, and poisons their hearts, persecutes them in cruel fashion, arouses anguished sensibility even to the core of their being, and does not admit of succor or comfort—this evil is met with only scorn and contempt. Death, the giver of peace, and even the desire for recovery is denied to it. Prometheus was chained to a rock because he had stolen the heavenly fire and breathed it into man, and vultures tore at his heart without ever devouring it. Love is the flame which the gods would fain have withheld from mortals, and jealousy is the rapacious vulture which cruelly avenges the theft. A man's jealousy is different from that of a woman; the source is the same, but the course and (to complete the simile of the river) the banks which the rivers touch differ as widely as do the places where they reach the sea, if they ever do reach it and are not lost in an abyss. The man does not hate his rivals; the woman abhors. The man's jealousy is a stormy sea flooding everything, tearing down and devouring everything in him that is strong; filling his innermost heart, absorbing all rivers of feeling and destroying his mind. The woman's jealousy is a narrow, turbulent, treacherous torrent which hides its depth, and high above which rise hard and silent banks; it heightens her sensibility and strengthens her mind. The jealous man is a wrathful lion; he is noble, and hunger only forces him to tear his prey to pieces. The jealous woman is an infuriated snake; she is vain, and passion only tempts her to sting. The anger of the jealous man is directed against the object of his love, and interrupts his love, and that of the jealous woman is directed against her rivals, and her love is intensified by it. Jealousy makes a fool of a man; it makes him ridiculous and lowers him in the love and esteem of the woman; but a woman gains in wit and charm by her jealousy, and and it makes her more attractive to the man. Jealousy is a terrible, sharp weapon which a woman uses lightly in order to cut a few sweets on which to feed her vanity; often she even wounds with it the man she loves, in order to enjoy his sufferings. The man disdains this cruel thing, though, did he use it, it would rarely miss its object of awakening the dormant love of a woman, of bringing hidden love to the surface, and of creating love where there was none."

The engagement of Miss Emma Beerman and Charles O. Hottel has been announced.
